The Heat of Summer is upon us and in full force. Tired of paying for water that is going out onto turf grass? Is it......

TIME TO XERISCAPE?

Xeriscape, landscaping for water savings as well as beauty, has come into its own. But what is a homeowner to do? Tear out everything you have and start over, all in the interest of saving water? Such drastic measures probably are not needed. Here are some guidelines that apply to owners of small-to-average-sized lots with traditional landscapes. Do not do it all at once - think about your landscape in pieces. Following are relatively inexpensive, weekend-manageable projects to get you started.

Remove a few feet of the grass along the driveway and sidewalk. Plant these areas with xeric ground cover plants, small shrubs, or perennial flowers. This allows these buffer areas to soak up water from lawn watering that normally would fall on the pavement and run off into the street.

Consider replacing the lawn on steep slopes with a rock garden, tiered wall, or low-spreading evergreens. As with pavement buffer plantings, the water that runs down the slope from other parts of the yard will be captured by these plants.

Re-group flowers and other plants so the yard is organized into different water use zones. Grouping or "zoning" plants with similar water requirements allows you to meet their water needs so some plants in the group are not overwatered while others are under watered. To further conserve moisture, use mulches between shrubs, flowers and in the vegetable garden.

You may have more lawn than you want. You could remove turf from narrow, hard-to-water strips and replace it with colorful drought-tolerant plants. Remove turf from between and behind shrubs; replace it with mulch.

Now, take a walk through your yard. Give it a second look. You will come up with ideas of your own. Be realistic about time and money. Xeriscaping slowly lets you allocate both over a span of years.

Happy Forth of July Everyone. Please make it a safe and sane celebration.
